

TO PARTICIPANTS, GUESTS AND ORGANIZERS OF THE SECOND EURASIAN RISK-2020 CONFERENCE AND SYMPOSIUM

Dear colleagues and dear friends!

The World Petroleum Council strongly values your active engagement in science, engineering, industry and education, and participation in international conferences and forums.

The Second Eurasian Conference and Forum RISK-2020 is organized as a Week of Science, Cultural Heritage and Religion in Georgia. This week will provide young experts with excellent opportunity for in-depth discussion of important issues associated with risk-related problems in the energy sector and, in the first instance, health, industrial and environmental safety, cyber security and industry image.

The key to successful development of the industry is innovative technologies, environmental responsibility and economic efficiency. We need fundamentally new solutions, a fresh look, and non-standard approaches that could be provided only by well qualified specialists. It is very important that this Symposium is an international platform enabling to conduct a dialogue between representatives of different countries and continents, to exchange experience and to think about the future.

I am confident that it will be a very interesting professional event that will bring to life new ideas, technological solutions, and that you all will enjoy exciting time spent in beautiful Georgia.

Senior Vice President of World Petroleum Council

Professor, Dr. Anatoly Zolotukhin
